Summer in Eugene

During the summer the Eugene-area is an idyllic mix of glorious sunny days, with daily temperatures in the mid-70s, and clear, balmy evenings. With its easy-going college town atmosphere, Eugene is a perfect summertime destination with easy access to outdoor experiences in the Cascade Mountains and the Oregon Coast, plus a schedule full of world-class sports, musical performances, and community events.

When not in class, explore hiking, biking, and running trails, wineries and microbreweries, outstanding restaurants and shops, and unrivaled performing arts or athletics including the 2014 IAAF World Junior Championships in Track and Field.

Housing

Oregon Law's Summer Sports Institute has partnered with a local apartment owner to offer students a luxurious yet affordable centralized housing option. For $1,000, Summer Sports Institute participants will receive a special six-week lease in the nearby Skybox or Courtside apartment complexes. This flat-fee will include furnishings and all utility costs for the duration of your stay.

More information about Skybox and Courtside is available at <http://liveskybox.com>.

Immerse yourself in a summer of legal classes unlike any other!

Oregon Law's Summer Sports Institute provides you with a full roster of engaging and educational coursework, guest lectures, and out of the classroom experiences for an unparalleled legal educational opportunity.

Led by all-star faculty and industry professionals from around the nation, this intensive five-week, six-credit program is designed to provide students with a comprehensive introduction to the legal topics of sports regulation and management.

Oregon's rich sports legacy includes Ducks Athletics, track star Steve Prefontaine, coaching legend Bill Bowerman, Title IX's Edith Green, and Nike's Phil Knight.

Priority applications accepted through April 15, 2014. Apply today at:

Orientation

To welcome incoming students and kick off the 2014 Oregon Law Summer Sports Institute with a bang, a catered orientation picnic will be hosted on July 6th at Autzen Stadium. An orientation meeting and other activities can also be enjoyed over the weekend.

Bonus Lectures

Because we cannot cover all of sports law during the regular class meetings, we will offer weekly Thursday-afternoon lectures on each of sports tax, PEDs, agents contracts, domestic violence and the sports culture, and sports marketing.

Negotiation Workshop

On the final day of classes, Oregon Law's award-winning negotiation faculty will host a half-day workshop on negotiation in the context of sports. Plans include for workshop participants to be joined by Oregon Law alumni at Nike and adidas.

Weekly Career Panels

A career-oriented panel discussion will be held each Friday, over a catered lunch, followed by a reception with the speakers. Hosted by leaders in the sports industry, the weekly career panels offer students valuable insight to the profession, along with priceless networking opportunities.

Sports, Fun & Other Activities

On Monday and Tuesday nights, we will screen documentaries from ESPN's award-winning "30 for 30" and "Nine for IX" series on the world of sports, after which we'll discuss the meaning and import of the issues presented. On Wednesdays, we'll organize a softball or soccer game or a tennis match. And each morning, anyone who is interested can join an optional group "fun run" in and around the Oregon campus. Starting at historic Hayward Field, the site of the 2016 U.S. Track and Field Olympic Trials, we'll divide by level and run or walk our way to good health.

On the weekends, we'll take you on a white water rafting trip down the picturesque Rogue River, and up to Portland for a Timbers soccer game and tour. We'll top it all off with tours of Oregon's state-of-the-art athletic facilities, including the innovative Football Operations Center, as described by Sports Illustrated.
